There can be no argument against the need for such a conference. The advent of Red China into the nuclear field has reopened and sharpened the whole question of nuclear control.

The present situation is not encouraging. Red China spurns the test ban pact as "nothing but a fraud" and rejects President John-son's proposal that Peking subscribe to it. On the other hand, the strained relations between the United States and Red China and the lack of formal diplomatic contact make it difficult for Washington to seat representatives at conference table with Peking

There is hope that the "overthe-back-fence" talks that have been maintained for several years between the two countries by way of their Warsaw embassies may provide one needed avenue of communication. But it becomes increasingly clear that a country which contains nearly one-quarter of the world's population must soon be to involve Red China in some form integrated into world councils if even more serious dangers are not to accumulate.

States policy. Had Khrushchev departed well before the Chinese achieved nuclear status, the problem for the West would be simply whether Soviet policy will con-tinue along its present

Lippmann post - Khrushchev rewill be stabilized. Had China exploded the nuclear device while Khrushchev was still securely in office, the prospect of a joint, though tacit, policy of containing China would have been good.

Now, instead of one variable—either in Russia or China-we are dealing with two variables. The conduct of United States policy is complicated many times over.

Two Assumptions

your movie column.

Constance Banks,

Tow-Away

We have, I think, to make two assumptions at the very beginning. One is that the post-Khrushchev regime will be fluid and uncertain for months, perhaps for some years to come. The other assumption is that while the Chinese nuclear device is no doubt primitive by our own standards and by Russian standards, China will nevertheless soon begin to be regarded, at least in Eastern Asia, as a nuine nuclear power.

Toward Russia and China, the grand objective of our policy must be to avoid should serve as a big persuader for a the unification of the Comunist world as policy of coexistence in Peking. one hostile nuclear power. outlying country areas. Perhaps an appeal should be made to all doctors, lawyers, etc., to have them come to us in our outlying districts. Another possibility on the cause side ould be Victoria's shortage of money.

Here is a dubious source of revenue. Under this system Victoria gets the price of the parking ticket issued, and the garage under contract to the city gets the tow-away tee. I presume a legal mind could tell me how the city could authorize the collection of fees for the garage but in my case the garage was unable to tell me how he was supposed to collect his

Sino-Soviet conflict. It does not necessarily mean that at all. But it does mean that we have a vital interest in the nature of any settlement that may be brought about

The critical question for us and for our allies is whether Russia and China will reach agreement on the basis of co-existence with the West or on the basis of revolutionary hostility against the West There is no preordained answer to this question. Quite conceivably it can be answered either way. Most certainly moreover, our own policies toward China and Russia can be highly influential and perhaps decisive in determining the outcome of the question whether Russia goes with China or China with Russia.

Extend Military System

The foundation of a policy must be an extension to China of the military system which has played such a crucial part in persuading the Soviet Union under Khrushchev to rule out nuclear war and seek peaceable coexistence. This is a policy of military superiority without pretending to supremacy, a superiority used to deter, President Lyndon Johnson on Sunday evening extended this policy to Eastern Asia, and we may take it for granted that if additional military power is needed to enforce these extended guarantees, there will be no hesitation about providing it. Thus, China starts its career as a nuclear power within the same framework of deterrence that the Soviet Union has lived in since the middle of the 1950s.

One of the cardinal fallacies of Goldwaterism, which would paralyze American diplomacy in the world, is the ignorant prejudice that all Communist states are alike and should be treated with the same degree of hostility.

Divergent Interests

The truth is that Russia and China, though they both avow Marxism and Leninism, are in different stages of deelopment and have divergent national interests. Moreover, the East European Communist nations desire an increasing degree of national independence from There is also every reason to think that the Southeast Asian Communist nations, like North Viet Nam and Laos, would prefer to avoid domination from Premier Lesage has reason to be satis fied that the Gordian knot of constitutional amendment has at last been cut. On the one hand, the essential rights of French Canada and the State of Quebec have received a new confirmation. On the other, the Canadian constitution remains what it has always been - a charter

The Ottawa agreement seems to have been reached in a spirit which corresponds more to Quebec's exigencies of 10 years ago than to Quebec needs in 1964.

Until 1960, if we are not mistaken, Quebec insisted that all changes affecting the essence of the British North America Act had to be agreed upon unanimously. Quebec saw in this rule the guarantee of the inviolate rights given it by the consti-tution. This was in an era when the federal government held the initiative and nvaded provincial domains from all sides. Insistence upon unanimity was the only means of defence Quebec had.

Was it opportune to insist so much on the rule of unanimity in 1964, at a time when Quebec has regained the initiative and is making ready to propose important constitution modifications to the rest of the country?

It may be doubted. One is filled with fear by the thought that, in a few years, ndments judged necessary by Quebec could be made impossible by the veto province which does not represent five per cent of the Canadian

The Ottawa agreement is a vote confidence in the political maturity of Canadians. But it is only a first step whose main effect may be to hasten the great confrontation to which we must come sooner or later.

The agreement makes certain elements of constitutional mechanism more supple. On the other hand, it risks freezing essential sections of the constitution. It does not satisfactorily settle the question of arbitration of problems which are sure to crop up. Nor does it deal with many outmoded articles of the constitution.

This agreement will only be useful if it opens the way for the holding, in the near future, of a true constitutional conference where the whole Canadian problem can at last be discussed from top to

Quebec L'Evenement

The representatives of the federalgovernment and the provinces have at last agreed on a formula for "repatriating" the constitution.

Part of the merit belongs to Mr. Fulton, the former justice minister in the Diefen-baker cabinet, who revived the proposed "repatriation." Mr. Favreau, the present justice minister, took up the Fulton formula to reach the agreement. One must also note the excellent work done in Quebec's name by Education Minister Paul Gerin-Lajole, recognized in Canada as specialist in constitutional questions.

It is no exaggeration to say that the reement is a historic date in the history our country. Canada has taken a cision, subject to ratification by the provincial legislatures and the federal Parliament, which will give it one of the last signs of formal sovereignty, the power to amend the constitution itself without having to get London's approval. Up to now, only lack of agreement among Canadians themselves prevented us from reaching this point. Now we only have to give ourselves an authentically Canadian flag and a national anthem. And this is much less complex than an agreement on a formula to amend the constitution significant news covered all levels of govern-ment and it is overlaid with the tension from the Russian and British situations and China's firing of its first A-bomb. But meanwhile it seems sensible to range over some of the personalities of last week

The predicament of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth as a person has bothered many of us. We do distinguish in our minds between the Queen as symbol and the Queen as a young man of sensitivity. Much of our anger over her visit is the realization that she could have been, and probably was, discomfitted by the coolness in Quebec City and the rather tawdry atmosphere of her tour, arising from the security and the press obsession. One factor in the situation which consoles me and hasn't been touched on is the knowledge that through it all the Queen was accompanied by the prime min-Ister, Whatever reservations any of us may have about Lester Pearson as a prime minister in polities, he is as warm and sensitive a man as one could wish for in giving encouragement and explanation to Her Royal Highness about our national difficulties.

I was not the only Member of Parliament who noted the easy friendliness and lack of stuffiness when Mr. Pearson stood beside the Queen as we passed and received her greeting at the Chateau Laurier reception. This kind of cliarm is the gift of few men. It's one of the main reasons for the Pearson advancement and he loyalty he evokes from his associates. My hunch is that the Queen did not leave Canada with any personal hurt over the incident of her visit and without any other evidence than my judgment of Mr. Pearson's character, I feel that he would be the reason.

Real Misjudged

There has been much surprise expressed at the forceful dignity of Real Caouette's statement in the House of Commons in which he took to task the bad manners and ignorance of those who created the chill and the furore. I expected it from him.

Many people have misjudged Real Caou-ette because of his exaggerations in political matters and in the process have missed what is so obvious when you meet him day to day. He has two most attractive traits—a sense of fairness and a sense of humor. His background is not typically French-Canada in that he comes from a hinterland area where society is very open. The mining area of Rouyn is not going to produce a stuffed-shirt. The interplay of language groups there is pretty genuine. cuette moves back and forth from English to French with a deftness that is uncanny. Despite a militancy about French-Canadian language rights, it has been noticeable that

What a jam-packed week. The spread of Mr. Caouette never carries it as far or as milicant news covered all levels of govern- nastily as some of his Creditiste colleagues. like Gilles Gregoire. One of the sad consequences of typing or labelling a man, for example, is the popular conception of Mr. Caouette as a primitive. This does little justice to his innate decency.

Some of you may remember that I wrote last year about interviews with Harold Wilson, the new prime minister in Britain. In terms of cold intellect and a thorough sensitivity to every shade and incident of politics, I have never met his match. I remember him expressing an opinion to me about his colleague, Richard Crossman. His point: that the terrible deficiency of the intellectual in politics is his tendency to be either contemptuous of, or indifferent to, popular sentiment. Mr. Wilson believed that President Kennedy was demonstrating the all-round qualities of the intellec-tual in politics by his total ruthlessness in using every tune and instrument of American media in getting to the average guy and in taking much of the whole society along with

Plunge Into It

Many people will speculate that Wilson's narvictory may inhibit the introduction of his very thorough economic program. I believe he'll plunge right into it and in the doing will take his case to the people over the heads of parliamentarians in the same way that President Kennedy did. And the contrast will come in this. Where Kennedy found a recalci-trant Congress balking much of what he and the public opinion wanted, Mr. Wilson will have public opinion as a leverage to control the British Parliament. I expect that the British will develop an awe of Mr. Wilson, particularly among the middle classes where intelligence is so much respected, and with the lower classes there will come a feeling of wonder at his cheeky knowingness.

Lastly, the departure of Nikita Khrushchev must be the most shocking experience that the Russians have had to face in generations. It was apparent to me in my Russian visit that this man was really loved because he symbolized the first opening-up of Communist society to the human preoccupations of friendliness and better family living standards and material comforts. Several times in Leningrad College students and librarians tried to express to me that what they were really saying was "we don't fear this man; he is not a stranger and he isn't distant from us." Aside from the apprehension they must now be feeling, there must be an immense passive resistance in prospect if the new leaders turn away from the Khrushchev policies on peaceful co-existence and a better living for the people.

Oversupply of Steel Concerns Producers

Is there something incongruous in the fact that at the same time as American steel men are talking about in some cases instituting higher prices for steel, a congress is about to convene in Luxembourg to discuss the chronic world oversupply of modity?

Bell

The European conference next week will be the first of its kind and will bring together some 900 of the world's leading steelmakers and users. Chief topic will be the encroachment of plastics and other materials into markets formerly reserved for steel. The European conference for steel.

In the U.S. meanwhile, the steelmasters have plucked up their courage once again and are insisting that price increases are necessary to restore the industry to health. It will be recalled that the industry was badly battered by the late President Kennedy in the spring of 1962 when it attempted to force price boosts. Again last August, when the industry took the same line. President Johnson stated flatly that any increase would "conflict with our national interest in price stability."

But all the indications are that once the heat and smoke of the U.S. presidential election has blown away, the big American steel companies will once again try to get more money for their product despite clear evidence of the risk they will be taking.

Cles.

Independent economic observers, however, are beginning to run up storm signals. Roy Reierson, chief economis to the Bankers Trust Company of New York, for instance, said recently that "inflationary tendencies are at work which could have a profound influence upon the economic climate and pose a real threat to the continuation of an orderly and generally steady economic advance."

Arthur F. Burns, who was chairman of the Council of Economic A d v is e r s under President Eisenhower, said a week ago that the economy might have to cope with "speculation and imbalances generated by inflationary pressures."

While the whole direction of the U.S. steel industry is of interest as what seems to many people a classic example of business shortsightedness, it is the inflationary aspect of steel price increases which is of most direct concern to Canadians. FRACTURED TOE SENDS KEENAN TO SIDELINES

Ranks of Victoria Maple Leafs will be stretched thinner for Saturday's Western Hockey League game against Vancouver Canucks at Memo-

Coach Rudy Pilous announced today that forward Larry Keenan suffered a broken toe in last Tuesday's game and will be sidelined for about 10 days. His place on a line with Ed Lawson and Dick Lamoureux will be filled by rookie Rollie

Pilous also announced that amateur defenceman Ralph Winfield, who has played three of the five games permitted in a professional trial, will leave Saturday morning for the Tulsa club of the

Practice Made Lou a Peach Of Goal Sniper

Goal-scoring, some people argue, is a natural hockey talent.

It's not something that can be acquired, they insist. Hockey players either have it or they don't. Practice only sharpens the shooting skills a slight

If that's the case, Lou Jankowski has wasted hundreds of hours in his hockey lifetime. Lou could have spent more time learning how to nursemaid peach trees and still managed to harvest a Western Hockey League scoring record.

Jankowski, the 33-year-old winger who is spending this season with Victoria Maple Leafs, has a different version. He's a practice addict and his success with a puck suggests it's worth listening when Lou is talking of his favorite hobby.

"Lots of guys seem to have trouble shooting," he said Thursday when asked about goal-scoring. "I den't think they practise enough. Most of them shoot high, although a low shot is harder for a goalie to stop."

The Port Dover, Ont., peach farmer has been shooting them low for 14 years as a professional and nobody in the WHL compiled a better scoring record during the years Lou spent with Calgary and Denver.

In five of his six WHL seasons he has potted more than 40 goals, collecting a total of 236 in 403 games. Jankowski's top production was in the 1960-61 season when he set a league record by firing 57 goals for Calgary and won the WHL's most valuable player award.

Off to Faster-Than-Usual Start

His least-rewarding season was two years ago when he managed only 24. But he bounced back with Denver Invaders last winter to fire a league-leading 41 scoring shots and earn a place on the WHL all-star team for the fourth time.

Currently he has three goals in five games with Victoria and figures he is ahead of his normal scoring schedule.

"I'm a slow starter," he explained. "I work pretty hard in summer and don't have a real problem getting into condition, but it seems to take me a few weeks to sharpen up my timing. One time in Calgary I had only 11 goals before Christ-mas and ended up with 45." Looking after the 2,000 peach trees on his farm at Port Dover accounts for the hard work that fills the days from the end of one hockey season to the start of the next.

Even before his pro days, the lean six-footer welcomed any work that would help build muscles, keep him in condition and

Fractured Skull In First Pro Game

As a youngster he banged pucks against backyard fences In solitary sessions. Later he added calisthenies and whiled away hours squeezing rubber balls and hand exercises. In his three junior years with Oshawa Generals, Jankowski took regular practices with the team and then worked on shooting by

It all played a part in improving power and accuracy and in developing the powerful wrists and arms that are so often trademarks of men who shoot hockey pucks best.

All the preparations for a pro career almost went down the drain in his first pro game with the Detroit farm club at Indianapolis. Lou was felled with a fractured skull and some thought his hockey days were over. He was back in action after 10 weeks but that was just the start of a string of hockey hurts.

Out of the shinny game Jankowski has also received fractures of a big toe, kneecap, collar-bone and hand, gone through a varicose vein operation, and ruptured tissue in a thigh which has forced him to wear an elastic bandage for many seasons.

Junior record of 65 goals in his last season with the Generals and who played 127 NHL games with Detroit and Chicago, still tries to follow advice handed out by a couple of his junior coaches.

"They advised me to keep shots low and get them away quickly, before a goalie can get set," he recalled.

A Believer In Moving and Thinking

But there's more to scoring than shooting. A fellow has to be in position to receive the puck and get a shot away.

You keep moving and try to put yourself in an opening," Lou explained, "You keep your head up and look where you

"You try to figure out what other players might do while waiting for a pass. And you keep in mind what the goalie should be doing, which part of the net he might leave unguarded, according to where the puck is coming from. Then you shoot quick before he has a chance to get set."

Briefly, that's the system of the 176-pounder, who doesn't like to use the slap shot and who is a fine team player despite his scoring record.

It's one he hopes will keep him in pro hockey "as long as I enjoy playing," and one he hopes will help the Maple Leafs to the WHL title.

Goalies say that Louis Casimer Jankowski's shot fools them with its deceptive swiftness and that his system works too well. The system and the Maple Leafs get their next test Saturday night at 8:30 when Vancouver Canucks move into Memorial

Enhances Corvair By LESLIE MILLIN

Lovely, but less than lustrous - that's one driver's impression of the 1965 Corvair. Or to phrase it a little differently, that's this driver's impression of the only 1965 Corvair he could get his hands on. Strikebound General Motors has its massive assembly line

As a result, only one new Corvair could be found by Morrison's Chevrolet-Oldsmobile here for test purposes.

That was a Monza convertible with the 110-horsepower engine and two-speed automatic transmission.

Bear that in mind, because a Corvair with any of the jazzier options could be a different machine indeed.

But to our tale. Without any doubt, the Coryair in its new shape is one of the nicer-looking cars conceived in America to-sporty image, as well as improving streamlining.

The model taken for a trundle by Morrison's sales manager Tony McManus and myself was red, with a black interior and white canvas top.

Inside the car, the standard of finish was good, with comfortable individual front seats-not buckets-and handsome ap-

A close look at the outside revealed rather unimpressive bodywork, with bits and pieces being in approximately the right places and giving the impression that whoever assembled the car wasn't altogether confident about it.

It was presumably an early model, however, and these things can usually be sorted out.

One of the "sporty" appointments inside the car was a woodrimmed steering wheel, which looked and felt good.

Ultra-Soft Ride, Steering

But the steering itself was so light that combined with the ultra-soft ride it definitely gave one moments of insecurity. Heavily on the credit side, however, is the redesign of the

For most people, the old Corvair had an unsettling tendency

In wet weather, the rear wandered around in an alarming But this has been effectively remedled by a Corvette-inspired type of fully-independent rear suspension that gives the car a marked understeer.

While the value of this might be debated in racing circles, the fact is that an understeering car is much, much safer in the hands of an average driver who has no ambition to rush to the supermarket looking like Stirling Moss.

That two-speed slush box undoubtedly will appeal also to the man off to the supermarket.

Acceleration Produced Whine

It did not appeal to me. A jab at the accelerator-this is with 110 horsepower, mark you-produced a whine and a few moments of inaction while the car made up its mind about

The Corvair is not a heavy car, and it has lots of tire area on the ground.

There doesn't seem to be any good reason for the throttle lag, and it's irritating. With a four-speed transmission, the performance would cer-tainly be considerably better.

Optional engine outputs are 140 and 180 bhp, with the latter opuonal engine outputs are 190 and 150 only, with the latter a supercharged version available in the topline Corsa model only, and not available with automatic transmission.

Up front, the luggage space (how can you call that thing in front a trunk?) is of a sufficiently odd shape that you'd better pack your things in something pretty flexible if you're to take advantage of all of it.

If the model as tested (accent on the "as tested"), most drivers would get a soft, comfortable, unexciting $3,700 ride to the supermarket. But you'd look good on the way.

ship Sunrise could carry its ee-man crew higher than humans had even been before because an extra retro-rocket provided insurance of bringing it down again, the scientists in the crew told a press conference Wednesday.

The six earlier Soviet cosm nauts reached peak altitude of about 125 miles. Konstantin Feoktistov, the Sunrise's scientist, said their orbits were calculated so that atmospheric drag would bring down their one-man satellites in about 10 days if their retro-rockets o failed to drop them to earth or

The three-man capsule had a spare retro-rocket for use in case the first one failed to fire on schedule, Feoktistov said. This made it possible to put the spaceship into a different type of orbit that would not be affected so soon by drag. It had a high point of 254.14

Feokfistov said the new spaceship also had a new "ion velocity" system of control that worked success-fully. He also mentioned without explanation a "soft landing" system for the cap-sule. It landed after 24 hours in orbit.

Feoktistov said it is possible to become accustomed to conditions of space flight. "One can live and work in these conditions." he said.

Three-Way Co-Operation Answer to PTA Success

We meant to buy a washing machine this week, but after an inspection of the proud white beauties in half a dozen stores, found ourselves so bewildered by claim and counter-claim that we simplified matters by giving the venerable automatic in our basement another chance.

Come morning, his wife loaded in the family wash. She brisked through the starting drill as she had a thousand or two times; but the response was dismayingly different.

Out from the wall, in a ponderous hippity-hop, marched the machine. Dazed by this revolt, our housewife retreated step by step before the mechanized monter tree. the mechanized monster, trying to check its advance with ineffectual shoves.

At the last of these, the At the last of these, the washer pivoted on one foot and trapped her in a corner. There she cowered, while at full stretch of hoses and wiring, the robot nudged, pushed and generally menaced her. The dance continued until in a final show of insurrection, her slave of insurrection, her slave emptied its sudsy gallonage on her feet.

Escaped but badly shaken, she phoned the repairman, who coaxed the exhausted washer back to its floor-bolts.

Rejuvenate Tired Menus With Spices

By PENNY SAVER

Have you ever cooked a meal which turns out like broiled sawdust? Has one of your dinner parties been a flop because the meal is flat and tasteless? Maybe you need a little spice put into your life! Many people fail to be good cooks simply because they are afraid to use spices or herbs in cooking.

Penny was in a shop which has an entire line of herbs and spices that will make even the dullest dish a gournet special. Spices come in attractive apothecary jars and store will supply you with a spice chart, telling of the various types of spices and their uses.

Not only does store have the regular spices but some different, exciting ones. Candamon is used to make Scandinaviar pastries and dishes. The flavor is subtle and reminiscent of snow and flords. Chile is given a hotter, tastier flavor with a sumin base. Spices are 45 cents a bottle.

Curry is a dish which cooks often ruin because they use to much or too little of the delicious sauce which raises it out of the medicere class. For curry in a hurry, try a bottle of curry paste which has all ingredients and only requires heating. Ground aut oil is added to give the sauce substance. The paste comes directly from Bombay and it is "hot". A one-pound bottle

A delicious meal to "warm the cockles of the heart"—and stomach—is a plate of hamburger mixed with chile and beans and topped with a hot, spicy chile sauce. It takes only minutes to prepare and is wonderful for cold frosty nights. A can of chile and beans—which, incidentally, is made in Mexico—is 25 cents. Sauce is 39 cents a can.

Many people are making ginger beer this year and for a stronger ginger taste try using pure Jamalean ginger which is slightly tastier than the regular brands. It gives an added "zing" to this home favorite.

A delightful idea for a different breakfast spread is lemon butter. Cut a sponge cake in half, spread the lemon butter over the bottom slice and cover the top with your favorite frosting

A handy gift item for a person whose tastes extend to honey is a box which contains six bottles of pure honey from Scotland, England, Greece, Spain and Tasmania. A box sells for $1.50. Or if you prefer jams, store has a gift box containing 12 small jars of breakfast spreads, from marmalade to rhubarb jelly. Jars have attractive tartan lids and labels and can be used again. The set is priced at $1.69. again. The set is priced at $1.98.

Who Invented the Typewriter?

No one noticed it at the time, but the invention of the typewriter started a major world-wide revolution. Women took to the neat little machine from the start, soon mastered its tap-tapping tricks and went forth to challenge men in the world of business. Today, most of the world's office secretaries are women.

Through the ages, many scribes must have wearied of the tedious task of copying words and letters by hand. Many of them must have dreamed of a machine that would make writing easier. FRIDAY, OCT. 23, 1964

A drive to raise $15,000 to advertise Victoria's Mild Season (winter) among prairie dwellers is only half completed, Nick North, chairman of the drive, said today.

"It is too early yet to say whether our objective will be reached," he added. The drive started Thursday when 56 bureau members can-vassed 460 firms in Greater

"Fifty per cent of the calls we made require a follow-up," Mr. North said. "Many executives were away and others wanted time to consider how

"However, it looks as if we shall get at least 150 new members as a result of the campaign."

This would raise the bureau's membership to a total of more than 300. Firms canvassed were asked contribute a minimum of $25 by taking out a member-ship in the Visitors Bureau and more according to their spending capacity. "Many of the firms ap-proached were unaware of the tremendous effort the bureau is making to attract tourists to Victoria," Mr. North said. "They did not know, for instance, that we spend $6,000 a year on the mailing of litera-

Addressing 100 delegates to the annual convention of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers, Pacific Northwest Region, Mr. Paget said the Arrow Lakes reservoir will cover a total of 30,400 acres of land. But 7,250 acres of this total is non-arable.

The total value of agricultural production from the area is $313,000.

"There are other areas of potentially arable land which will be brought into production to offset any loss of production in the flooded area as markets for sale of local products improve."

The Arrow Lakes area is an agriculturally deficit area, he is aid.

"Because the interior wet belt has short, cool and wet summers it is not a leading recreational area and there are no commercial fisheries, Mr. Paget said.

"The economy of the Arrow Lakes where the dislocation will be most serious is now mainly based on forest products and this will not be adversely affected by the dams."

The Arrow Lakes reservoir, with an estimated capital cost of $129,500,000, is scheduled to be in service April 1, 1969. The Say, 1, 1969, 1, 19

We meant to buy a new washing machine this week, but after an inspection of the proud white beauties in half a dozen stores, found our-selves so bewildered by claim and counter-claim that we simplified matters by giving the venerable automatic in our basement another unbolting granny's feet her tenderly to his truck, he lingered to spin this disturbing tale.

Our washer, said he, has an equally ancient twin pris-oned in a small chilly shed at the back of a Victoria home. A while ago this relict began to groan and grumble, a condition which the man of the house undertook to Finished, and without so much as a goodnight to this faithful family servant, he took himself off to warmth, and comfort. Such was his haste that he forgot to shackle the old lady's legs to her concrete slab, a precaution necessary with these vintage automatics.

Come morning, his wife loaded in the family wash. She brisked through the starting drill as she had a thousand or two times; but the response was dismayingly different.

Out from the wall, in a ponderous hippity-hop, marched the machine. Dazed by this revolt, our housewife retreated step by step before ing to check its advance with neffectual shoves

At the last of these, the washer pivoted on one foot and trapped her in a corner.

There she cowered, while at full stretch of hoses and wiring, the robot nudged, pushed and generally menaced her. The dance continued until in a final show of insurrection, her slave of insurrection, her slave emptied its sudsy gallonage

Escaped but badly shaken she phoned the repairman, who coaxed the exhausted washer back to its floor bolts.

He then asked the still-haken chatelaine why in heck she hadn't twisted the dial to "Off," or snatched out the wall plug.
"It wouldn't twist," she told him, "and my husband had clamped the plug in . . . Anyway I was scared out of my wits."

There is a moral in this rim account. So many arnings lurk there, in fact, that we can take our pick.

But pausing only to suggest

There is one small, unrelated matter to be settled before I slip away, keeping teletypes lest they leap on me from their cubicle.

Jones Ordered

To Stand Trial

Magistrate William Ostler issued the order after a preliminary hearing in Saanic central court.

The trial will probably begin Nov. 4 before Victoria County Court Judge M. T. Drake. Jones is accused of not paying $1,577 due on a 1963 car obtained from George Hankinson, former operator of Pacific Chrysler, w-defunct firm which sold cars to the provincial government.

He is also accused of getting a new 1964 convertible from Hankinson at less than cost

Evidence at the preliminary hearing indicated Jones got the new car on an even trade.

Hankinson, facing two charges of conferring benefits on Jones, will appear next Wednesday for preliminary hearing.

GOOD ARGUMENT

Magistrate Ostler said Jones' defence lawyer, T. P. O'Grady, submitted a forceful and persuasive argument in favor of dropping the charges.

The Crown's evidence, presented by prosecutor Lloyd G.

Teen-Age Victor to Get Wish On Currents of World Oceans

By CHARLES WHITED MIAMI, Fla. (AP)-Victor Soler, 15, had two big wishes in life: To play the trumpe and to go to the far places of the world. He had a great love for the Even after the fevers began last April, and the tests and shots and trips to the hospi-tal, Victor would go to the beach with his parents and little sister, Naya, 7. He would lie down where the surf could touch him and go to Doctors said Victor had Hodgkins Disease, a chronic, progressive ailment that attacks the lymph system, liver and spleen.

Unable to continue his ninth-grade classes, Victor's world shrank to the confines of his bedroom.

Nina Soler felt that her son was entitled to make a vital decision. She approached it very lightly. "Victor," she said one eve-ning, "you had better eat, or you'll starve to death." 'IT DOESN'T MATTER'

"Momma, it doesn't matter any more," he replied.
